Secretary.
MR. KENNEDY PRICE, BATHURST.

Copper ore having been discovered on the estate of John Findlater Clements, Esq., known as Summerhill, situated on Campbell's River, about twenty-five miles from Bathurst, thirty individuals agreed to subscribe £20 each, and formed themselves into an Association (of which the above Provisional Committee are members) for the purpose of opening a mine on that estate, with the ultimate view of establishing a public company, should their operations turn out favourably in the mean while.

The Association accordingly commenced operations, and expended £150 and upwards in sinking a shaft, and in other works, and lately employed Mr. John Whitford, a practical miner of considerable experience, to view the mine, and to report upon it.

Mr. Whitford reports that the mine now opened discloses a lode of copper which, in his opinion, may be worked with considerable profit.

£400 and upwards of the original subscriptions still remain unexpended. Arrangements most advantageous to the Association have been entered into with the Proprietor of the Estate, securing to the Association the right of working all mineral property on the estate, consisting of 1600 acres of land, for a period of twenty-one years, renewable for another twenty-one years.

Materials for erecting Smelting Works are on the estate, there being an extensive formation of soapstone, which is well known to be the best material for resisting the intense heat of smelting furnaces. There is also a plentiful supply of water and timber contiguous to the mine.

The Association, therefore, are of opinion that they are now in a position to carry out the original intention of establishing a Public Company to work the mine, and with that view beg to submit the following plan to the public.

The Company to be called
"THE BATHURST COPPER MINING COMPANY.
CAPITAL £10,000,
IN 2000 SHARES OF £5 EACH.

The shares to be disposed of in the following manner:—Ten shares to be allotted to each of the members of the present Association, and to be considered as paid up shares on payment by the members of the Association of £10, the amount of their original subscriptions. These shares shall not be transferable or saleable until 600 other shares shall have been allotted to applicants for the same.

1000 shares to be open to the public, and the remaining 700 shares to be reserved for the benefit of the Company.

That when 500 of the shares open to the public shall have been applied for, the Provisional Committee shall allot the same.

No person to hold more than 50 shares.

A deposit of £1 per share to be paid to the treasurer of the Company within the time specified in the letter of appropriation. The residue on each share to be paid by monthly instalments of 10s. each.

That in the event of any deposits on any shares applied for and allotted by the Provisional Committee not being paid within the time mentioned in the letter of appropriation, the applicant shall forfeit his right to such shares, and they will be allotted to another applicant.

And in the event of any monthly instalment upon any share not being paid up within fifteen days after the same shall become due, such share shall be forfeited to the Company.

That the Company shall be managed by five Directors, and the bonâ fide holder of fifteen shares shall be eligible to become a Director.

As soon as 500 shares shall have been allotted, and the deposit paid, a special meeting of the shareholders will be convened by public advertisement, to determine upon the choice of Directors, and the further constitution of the Company.

No debts will be incurred beyond the amount of available assets, hence no shareholder will be liable beyond the amount of his share or shares.

Applications for shares to be made to the Provisional Committee, under cover to the Secretary, from whom further information may be obtained. All letters must be post-paid.

FORM OF APPLICATION.

To the Provisional Committee of the Bathurst Copper Mining Company.

Gentlemen,—I request that you will allot me shares of £5 each in the above Company, and I hereby undertake to accept the same, and to pay the deposit of £1 per share thereon into the Union Bank of Australia (Sydney or Bathurst), within fourteen days after notice of such allotment.

IMPORTANT TO PARTIES WEARING ARTIFICIAL TEETH.

MR. J. EMANUEL, Surgeon-Dentist, duly qualified, wishes to inform his patients and the public in general, that he has received from a friend, an eminent Dentist in Paris, an information relative to making the plates that artificial teeth are fixed on. It is an entire new system, thereby doing away with all irritation, so that persons with most tender gums can wear them with the utmost ease and comfort; by their peculiar method many hundreds of persons will now be able to use Artificial Teeth that could not possibly do so before.

N.B.—This discovery being only known to Mr. E. (in this City), he cautions the public against imposition.

Mr. Emanuel begs to remind the public, that as there is no decided cure for tooth-ache but the extraction of the tooth, Instantaneous relief may be obtained by purchasing his Tincture, so universally known and approved of; sold in bottles with directions for use at 2s. 6d.; also, Soothing Syrup for Infants teething. Teeth and stumps extracted; teeth cleansed of tartar, and stopped with pure virgin gold. Artificial palates on Mr. E.'s own principle, approved of by the Faculty of this city.

R. GIBBES, Collector."

THE ARIEL AND JOHN AND CHARLOTTE.—We have been favoured by the agent of the above vessels (Mr. R. T. Ford), with the following extracts from a letter received by him from Captain Dobson, of the Ariel, which vessel sailed from Sydney on the 3rd October, with stock and stores on account of the Colonial Government, for the use of Mr. Kennedy's expedition party. The John and Charlotte sailed hence on the 19th September, with stores, on account of the Commissariat, for the use of H.M.S. Rattlesnake and Bramble:—"Port Albany, November 30, 1848. Dear Sir,—I arrived here on the 27th October, through the inner passage; the John and Charlotte arrived about five or six days before me. Both the Bramble and Rattlesnake were at anchor here on our arrival, and after supplying me with muskets and ammunition, the former sailed for Endeavour Straits for the purpose of surveying there, and the latter for Sydney. The Bramble returned here again yesterday, (29th November), on her way to Sydney, by beating down the inner route. No signs of Mr. Kennedy yet, and he has been away from Rockingham Bay now six months. I must keep two months' provisions on board for returning to Sydney; and as the charter-party says nothing about what time we are to remain, I know not how to act. Stop I cannot, longer than my provisions will last. If you remember, the Colonial Secretary stated that Mr. Kennedy would be here before me, and I have now been waiting for him thirty-four days. The blacks here are a very treacherous set; they caught our stockman by the throat a few days since, and would have choked him, had we not been near to assist him. On seeing us approach, they made off, but took with them the man's jacket, in return for which I seized their canoe. In a day or two, they returned with the jacket, upon which I gave up the canoe again."

The Emma has made a fair passage of twelve days from Auckland. On her passage down from Newcastle she lost only twenty-eight head of cattle and two horses out of two hundred of the former, and twenty-six of the latter, shipped. The brig Louisa, hence the 7th December, arrived at Auckland on the 23rd, and was to sail again for Sydney the day after the Emma, consequently may be hourly expected. The brig Maukin, hence the 12th December, also arrived at Auckland on the 26th, and was to sail again for Sydney on the 3rd instant. The barque May Queen, hence the 8th December, arrived at Auckland on the 23rd, and from thence would proceed to Valparaiso. The Nimrod, from Twofold Bay, arrived at Auckland on the 20th December, with a loss of fifty head of cattle. She was to sail again for Sydney on the 30th ultimo. About the 8th December, the Emma spoke the American ship St. George, of New Bedford, twelve months out, with 150 barrels sperm oil. The Emma has merely called in at this port to water, being chartered to make another trip from Newcastle to Auckland with stock.

To which his Worship has returned the following reply:—"Town Hall, Sydney, 9th January, 1849. In compliance with the above requisition I hereby convene a meeting, to be holden at the Town Hall on Monday next, the 15th day of January instant, at 3 o'clock P.M. EDWARD FLOOD, Mayor."

SPECIAL LICENSING MEETING.—A special meeting of the magistrates of the city was held yesterday at the Police Office, George-street, for the purpose of considering the applications of various individuals for publicans' licenses. Shortly after 12 o'clock thirteen magistrates had assembled, being a majority of the qualified justices. The following were the gentlemen who attended:—The Mayor, the Attorney-General, Messrs. David Allan, J. L. Innes, A. Sillitoe, George Hill, J. Henderson, M'Lean, Captain Moriarty; Messrs. Wilshire, Thurlow, and Broughton. On the assembling of the magistrates in the private room, some preliminary discussion took place, as to whether the meeting should be open to the public or not. The Mayor having at length taken the chair, it was moved by Alderman Thurlow and seconded by Mr. George Hill, "That the Court be held openly," which was negatived by a majority of 9 to 4. The Court then went into the consideration of the various licenses, when the following were granted:—Samuel Barnett, Drapers' Arms, Sussex-street; Thomas Collins, Omnibus Inn, Parramatta Road; Mary King, Albert Inn, George-street; William Newland, Glasgow Arms, George-street; John Robinson Harper, Butchers' Arms, York-street; Edward Cunningham, Dublin Tavern, George and Sussex streets; Robert Battley, Steamboat Inn, Windmill-street; Michael Williamson, Belfast Wine Vaults, Chippendale-street and Botany-road; William O'Brien, Royal Oak, Parramatta-road; Isaac Titterton, White Horse Cellar, George-street; Charles H. Salmon, Australian Hotel, George-street; William Ryan, Railroad Inn, Chippendale; James Small, The Robert Burns, Bathurst and Sussex streets. The following licenses were transferred:—[illegible]rton Castle, Kent-street, from W. [illegible] to Ralph Benjamin; Dolph[illegible] street, from David M'Bride [illegible] Burn; St. John's Tavern, George-[illegible] Charles H. Salmon to Charles[illegible] Steam Engine Inn, George-street, from Jeremiah Murphy to Joseph Johnson; Shamrock Inn, Campbell-street, from Mary Blake to John Blake. The following confectioners' licenses were also granted:—John Curran, King-street; James Cropper, South Head Road; and Mark Isaacs, Hunter-street. The confectioners not appearing to enter into the necessary bonds, it is doubtful if the licenses can issue.

POLICE OFFICE.—The following magistrates took their [illegible] on the bench yesterday: Mr. Holden, Alderman Egan, Captain Innes, and Mr. Miles. Of the magistrates on the roster for the day, Messrs. Holden and Mitchell, the latter did not attend. Captain Moriarty and Mr. Moir are summoned for to-day.

STABBING.—Between seven and eight o'clock on Tuesday evening a person named Tunks, residing at Blackwattle Swamp, was given into the custody of Police Constable Ross, charged with stabbing his wife. It appears that some dispute arose between Tunks and his wife, about money matters, in the excitement of which the former seized a knife and threw it at the latter, inflicting a wound in the forehead. Tunks having been secured, the wife was taken to the Infirmary, where, on examination, the wound was found to be of but trifling extent. Tunks was brought before the Police Bench yesterday, but his wife declining to prosecute, he was discharged with an admonition.

MURDER.—Two or three weeks ago, Dr. Tierney was called upon at three o'clock in the morning to see a man named Macartney, at Loseby's public-house, who it was alleged had hurt himself by falling out of bed. Dr. Tierney found that the man was so severely hurt on the head that the injury could not have been inflicted by a fall, and that he could not by possibility survive its effects—indeed was then so far gone as to be unable to speak three words with coherence. He advised the instant removal of the man to the Infirmary, and on leaving the house met a policeman, stated the circumstances, and advised him how to act, but strange to say the worthy conservator appears not to have taken the slightest notice thereof—not even so much as to report the information to his superior officer. The next day, the father of the wounded man came to Sydney and removed him, not to the Sydney Infirmary but to his residence at Bankstown. The man shortly afterwards died, and but for the information on the subject which most praiseworthily was forwarded by Dr. Tierney to Dr. Parsons, of Liverpool, no inquest would have been held on the body. A post mortem examination was made by Drs. Tierney and Parsons, and the finding of the jury, we are told, was wilful murder against some person unknown. The singular part of the business is, that there were three other persons sleeping in the same room with the deceased, and several more in adjoining apartments. It is scarcely credible that if the policeman had used that diligence which is usually manifested by members of that force where a paltry fine is involved, and had examined the premises, and perhaps made prisoners of the men sleeping in the same apartment with the deceased, evidence would not have been wanting on which to ground a more definite verdict by the coroner's jury than under the circumstances they were able to arrive at.

NEW OMNIBUS.—A new "Bus" has lately been started in Sydney, plying from thence to Parramatta, under the title of the Golden Fleece. The mode of construction is a novel one in the colony, although it was we believe, figured in one of the English illustrated papers as the latest and patented construction of this very useful mode of conveyance. The proprietor, however, justly claims praise for its introduction into the southern hemisphere. Neither must the builder (Mr. Martin) of the "Fleece" be forgotten, for with some trifling exceptions, which could not be avoided, its timber is colonial. The difference of this from other "Busses" consists in the door-way being carried above the roof, so that there is a seat extending "fore and aft." This presents a great improvement on the old coach box and hind seat. There is no suddenly awkward jolting, and the outsiders may sit as comfortably as in an arm chair. Judging too from the height at which the vehicle is hung, and its breadth, an upset is not very likely to occur.

SACRILEGE AT KISSING POINT CHURCH.—A few mornings since it was discovered that during the preceding night several of the windows of the Kissing Point or Ryde Church had been broken and an entrance through one of them effected into the sacred edifice. An examination of the interior showed that several books had been (apparently most wantonly) torn up, and many stolen. The outrage was very properly kept secret until something like a clue was obtained to its perpetrators, which it is stated has now been acquired.

WOOL SALE.—Mr. Samuel Lyons yesterday held an auction sale of wool, when the following prices were realized:—1 bale locks, 1½d., 7 ditto ditto and pieces, 4¾d., 26 ditto greasy, 4½d., 2 ditto ditto, 4¼d., 3 ditto skin, 4½d., and 2 ditto grey, 7d. per lb.

PARRAMATTA.

THE DISTRICT COUNCIL.

WEDNESDAY.

PRESENT—The WARDEN (Dr. Hill); and Messrs. Howison and J. Pye, Councillors.

FINANCE.

The WARDEN stated the receipt of a letter from the Colonial Secretary, intimating that the sum of £91 6s., the amount of rental of the several tolls in the District for the month of November, 1848, had been paid to the account of the District Treasurer.

The Council having resolved into Committee, directed the payment of the salaries of the officers, forage, ration, and several other accounts, due up to the 31st ultimo.

WORKS IN PROGRESS.

The DISTRICT SURVEYOR handed in his usual report to the Council. By this document it appeared that of the lines of road under the Council's charge, the Penrith (or, Western) Road was most pressingly calling for repair; the Sydney and Parramatta line, as also that from that township so far as it extended towards Windsor (about 13 miles) being very substantial. The whole of the labour, free as well as bond, at the disposal of the Council, was therefore employed on that road. The Council approved of this arrangement, and other portions of the Surveyor's report, relating to some details respecting an arrangement made for the supply and spreading of metal, were also approved of.

CONTRACTS.

The Council proceeded to open tenders, forwarded in consequence of public advertisement, of the supply of forage required for the year 1849.

Four tenders had been sent in, and that of Mr. Edward Fuller, of the Windsor Road, being the lowest, was declared to be the accepted one.

The Council then adjourned until the 24th instant.

FINANCES OF 1849.—Although no formal discussion occurred before the Council yesterday respecting the Council's "ways and means" for the present year, it seems pretty generally understood that the amount derivable from the tolls levied in the district will be continued to be handed over to the Council to be expended under its superintendence. This arrangement has now prevailed for the last three or four years, and during which period the Executive have frequently expressed a high approv[illegible] the judiciousness of the expendi[illegible] an[illegible] ity of work performed.

COU[illegible] REQUESTS.—[illegible] sittings of the Cour[illegible]quests for this district commence this d[illegible] en the plaints entered in the £10 jurisdiction will be adjudicated. The £30 Court will be held to-morrow. The list of plaints in both Courts shows the smallest number ever entered for trial; there being in the £10 Court forty-four cases, six of which were continued or postponed from the last sittings, and in the £30 jurisdiction five cases, of which one is a postponed case. The Court of Requests, so far as Parramatta is concerned, judging from late sittings, is getting "small by degrees and beautifully less."

IRRIGATION.

(From the New South Wales Sporting and Literary Magazine.)

IT is not intended to recommend practical irrigation upon the system of a watering pot, or to advise any machinery beyond a common pump. In cases of dams in hilly or broken countries, where water may frequently be stopped back to a great distance, and of course in considerable quantities in their natural channels, it will generally stand at considerable elevations above the surrounding lands which lie below the dam. In these cases, and I have seen many such, the water may be drawn from the reservoirs without any other machinery than the insertion of a small tube or pipe of iron, of such dimensions as may be required, one end being sloped without diminishing the bore, for the purpose of facilitating its passage when being driven through the puddled section of clay, at or near the base of the dam. The tube, being hollow, will be filled up in passing through the clay, but this may be cleared, by a stick like the ramrod of a gun, which, with the pressure of water, will soon force a passage.

The dam should be made impervious to water by means of a well puddled section of clay about eighteen inches or two feet thick, banked up on each side with earth of sufficient thickness and strength, and supported (if stone be not at hand) on both sides with upright slabs, well secured, according to the judgment of the operator, by felled trees thrown across, and whose ends should be firmly embedded in the ground on both sides of the creek. At the point at which it might be thought advisable to introduce the pipe into the puddled bank for the purpose of drawing off the water as required, the earth banking on each side should be discontinued, leaving a sufficient space or interval at this point to afford facilities for approach at the back, for the purpose of inserting or withdrawing the pipe or tube; and the angles of the earth embankment should be well secured by slabs, so that they are firm and well supported. The opening caused by this break between the puddled section and the water or reservoir on that side will receive the protruded end of the tube, which will be in contact with the water, and this opening or space should be enclosed by an upright slab or slabs firmly fixed, so as to protect the mouth of the tube from sand or any other sediment brought down to that part by floods. The puddle section at these openings must also be secured by an upright slab firmly fixed at the front and back, and these slabs should be indented or shouldered at their bottom edges so as to admit of the tube being passed under them in its passage through the clay section to the water in the reservoir.

In forming the puddled section of eighteen inches or two feet in width, a wooden trough of about six inches square should be introduced and built in, and carried from the base to the top in an upright position in the centre of the puddled section, or if thought desirable it may be a foot in the transverse direction by six inches. The bottom edges of the boards of this trough at the back and front must also be indented or shouldered, and placed exactly opposite the two indented slabs before named, so that the tube may be freely passed through them all as well as the puddled section to the water in the reservoir. When it is required to withdraw the tube and stop the flow of water, it is only necessary to throw a few lumps of moist clay well worked (or keep a supply in it) into the upright trough; the clay is quickly worked and pressed by a stick or pole introduced at the top of the trough, and this simple operation effectually plugs the orifice and stops the egress of water. No apprehensions need be entertained that the water will escape if proper attention be paid to the closing of the orifice as above directed, nor will the frequent insertion and withdrawing of the tube impair the works, if only common care be observed in the management of them.

It is, perhaps, proper to observe that the writer of this has had practical experience of the efficacy of this mode of draining water from reservoirs, and can with confidence recommend it as deserving the notice of any person who may be in a position to make trial of it.

Should the water be required for such a construction as the one I have described, for other purposes than irrigation, it may be regulated at will, and received into a wooden trough, either open or otherwise, from the tube at the bottom of the creek, which is supposed to be dry below the dam. From this trough it can be led to the nearest and most convenient conductor or drain (deeply dug if necessary) from the sides of the creek to the ground (should the fall be sufficient (upon which it is intended to be used, whether for sheep, cattle, or any other purpose.

When water cannot be dammed up, or excavations made above the level of the land for which it is required, then, of course a pump must be put up; but as a common pump will throw water to the height of twenty-eight feet without any very great labour, very few instances would occur in which anything beyond this would be required; and if water is in sufficient abundance, and more than a man's labour be required at the pump, the fixing of a single crank and apparatus to the pump for a horse or a bullock, or the adoption of the still more simple plan of a lever and a bucket, or bag made of a bullock's hide, as commonly used in India, could not in either case be a work of much cost or difficulty.

There are, however, many situations in this colony with retentive soils, in undulating districts, sufficiently elevated and connected above with lands which would pour down their surface waters into basins formed for their reception to almost any extent. From these, limited portions at least of the surrounding lands below, which are now almost without value, might be improved and rendered highly productive in seasons of drought, when we all know the best lands are often rendered unproductive.

In India, where hand labour so commonly prevents the application of science, and where numbers almost annihilate space and time, we see them drawing by hand, or by the rudest machinery, water from their wells, with which they fill small basins or pools in various parts of their grounds; and by means of wooden spades or scoops they throw the water from the pools over the surrounding surface until it becomes saturated. This is one amongst many other better and more extensive modes of irrigation in India, and although it is not one which could be adopted here, it serves to show, the use made of, and the importance attached to, irrigation in a dry country, even by a rude and indigent people, with no other assistance than their own manual labour. Throughout all the countries of the East, from the remotest ages, as well as in the records of Scripture, we find the people engaged in the most gigantic labours for the preservation and management of water. The ruins of aqueducts and works of irrigation upon scales so stupendous as to astonish even the most scientific and experienced men of the present age, are not uncommon in those countries, and the common practice of irrigation in the present day in Egypt, Persia, and China, as well as in India, and many other parts of the world, shows the estimation in which it is still held in countries which, like our own, suffer during the prevalence of periodical droughts.

It may be objected that a practice which prevails from necessity in a thickly populated country is not applicable to a thin and scattered population like our own, and to a country which furnishes abundance without the necessity for having recourse to such artificial means for production. In a limited view of the subject this reasoning may seem to be correct, but if we look a little farther into it the argument will perhaps not appear quite so conclusive with reference to particular parts of this colony as at first sight it seems to be. From a dearth of labour we are threatened with supplies beyond our means of employment, at least for the junior branches of families; and if we had the pecuniary means after the demands for shepherds, herdsmen, house and other servants are supplied, it would be a difficult task I think to point out to fresh capitalists any source for the profitable employment of their capital beyond the usual inducements for investing in sheep and cattle, or tram-[illegible]. The establishing of new colonies, which never have proved either profitable or satisfactory to those who first settled them, without the application of forced or convict labour, is a question which concerns other people in a greater degree than it does those who possess land here, and wish to make the best use of it. We should endeavour to improve the land we occupy near the coast and the towns, and that which has been rejected in situations, otherwise eligible, from want of water, and by such improvements we may establish villages with an industrious population, such as we should all like to see. At present this seems to be almost impossible for want of water, if for no other reason. If proofs are required of this, look at the miserable abortive attempts at fixing townships or villages between Sydney and the towns of Parramatta and Liverpool: in seasons of severe drought the few inhabitants in most of them are compelled to send miles for water, although the entire country is composed of a soil sufficiently retentive to hold it to any extent. And by adopting proper means the inhabitants might be amply supplied with permanent water for all their purposes. I trust I shall be able to show that the green leaves of the mulberry tree for the production of silk, the variegated and beautiful blossoms of the cotton plant, the gay garden, and the green lawn, may yet enliven, in the driest seasons, the parched and dreary aspect which on all sides is presented to us in the districts near to our metropolis.

LORD GREY AND COLONIZATION.

(From the Morning Chronicle, August 18.)

THE zeal of renegades is proverbial: they always think it necessary to meet suspicions about the sincerity of their conversion by a peculiarly officious championship of their new creed. Again, it has been often remarked that the loudness and vehemence of a disputant are generally in an inverse proportion to the goodness of his cause; and when a man's conscience pricks him he finds a certain satisfaction in remembering and repeating all the arguments that he has learned or invented on the side of that course which he has, on other grounds, determined to pursue. It is upon these two admitted principles of moral philosophy that we account for Lord Grey's peculiar ostentatious advocacy of the present system of dealing with our colonies, and for the marked, and almost spiteful way in which he delights to stigmatise every opinion, and even every term, which appears to him connected with reforming theories on that subject. Of all things in the world, what he appears to hate most is the idea of "systematic colonization."

For the last ten years, Lord Grey has been living on his reputation as a colonial reformer; he was the Hercules of the "Augean stable," the antagonist of the "Office," and the advocate of self-government for our dependencies. His theory for solving the condition-of-the-country question was "systematic colonization." He seconded Mr. Charles Buller's celebrated motion which was directed to that object; and, in fact, he contributed as much as anybody else to bring it into temporary discredit, by talking too much about it. It is really unnecessary to produce passages out of his speeches, as Lord Monteagle took the trouble of doing, to prove all this; for one would as soon think of elaborating a system of quotations to prove that Mr. Cobden was an advocate of free trade. It is, therefore, too bad to take, as he does, every opportunity of denouncing and reviling his old doctrines and those who hold them—

> Perhaps it is right to dissemble his love,
> But why should he kick us down stairs?

As for Mr. Hawes, we say less about him, because we expected less from him. He followed in Lord Grey's wake when his lordship was a colonial reformer; he does the same now that he is a colonial Conservative. It is like a scene in The Critic. Lord Grey having gone stark mad in white satin, Mr. Hawes shows his devotion by going stark mad in white linen.

Lest the world should not be sufficiently aware, from the debate on Sir William Molesworth's motion in the Commons, of the line which Ministers intend to take, Lord Grey has chosen to volunteer a field-day, on the subject of colonies and colonization, in the Lords. After informing us that "systematic colonization" is a great humbug (if looked upon as a means of affecting the home market for labour, and of reducing surplus population so as to give more employment and better wages to the operative classes), and that the Government have no plan of any kind in view, for making our colonial dependencies more available than they now are as fields for emigration, he proceeds to give us, à propos of nothing, an elaborate dissertation on the beauties and merits of Australian colonization, coupled with studious disparagement of the old North American colonies, and a careful comparison of the statistical results of both systems, of course to the disadvantage of the latter. The Assistant Under-Secretary, it seems, "has taken the trouble to draw up" a tabular statement, showing how very much more rapid the progress of modern British colonies has been than that of the earlier ones; and Lord Grey is delighted to find that, far from having "lost the art of colonization," as Dr. Whateley once flippantly said we had, we are, in this respect, improving every day upon the wisdom of the ancients; in fact, that Sydney and Hobart Town, like express trains and spinning-jennies, are most gratifying evidences and trophies of modern civilization.

Now, to expose all the erroneous representations of fact, and all the false theories of political economy with which Lord Grey's speech abounds, would far surpass the present limits of our space; we shall content ourselves, therefore, with pointing out for condemnation what appears to us the most striking and mischievous amongst them; and we shall reserve, for a future opportunity our comments on the general tenor of the speech, when looked upon as a programme of ministerial intentions on the subject of colonization. We allude to the self-gratulatory comparison of Australian with American colonization—a comparison which was first made, we believe, by Mr. Elliott, and which is now adopted by Lord Grey with the delight which a man, ignorant of his subject, feels at obtaining a new and plausible pretext for maintaining his own foregone conclusion.

We may remark, in the first place, that no fair comparison can be made without estimating the superiority of the natural advantages possessed by our Australian dependencies over those of New England. To draw conclusions respecting the merits of systems of colonization, from a mere comparison or exports and imports, is as unfair as it would be to test systems of farming by a mere comparison of produce, without reference to the natural fertility of the soil. The early American colonists had to contend, not only against a barren soil and an inhospitable climate, but against powerful tribes of natives, as well as against the yet more formidable hostility of other European nations. Not only was their war with the wilderness a much more laborious operation than the Australians have to perform, but war with human enemies was almost their chronic and natural condition—a condition very unfavourable, as Lord Grey will admit, to the "growth of imports and exports."

Again, the immensely increased amount of those resources, in the parent State, from which the colonies are nourished, viz., population and capital, as well as the vast progress which, since the settlement of New England, has taken place in the art of navigation, and in all the other arts of civilised life, by which the wants of colonists are supplied, and their prosperity promoted, introduce altogether new and most important elements into the comparison. But the most material consideration is, that the Australian colonies have flourished under a system of lavish expenditure from the mother country, while the American colonies, until the war, never cost us a farthing. It is very easy to produce a flourishing table of "imports and exports," when, as at the present moment, for every 20s. of exports to our colonies we expend upon them, directly, 9s. It is very satisfactory to contemplate the growth and prosperity of New South Wales, till we come to ask for the per contra side of the balance sheet, when we discover the immense supply of convict labour, and the enormous and wasteful outlay of Government money, which have been the main causes of this rank luxuriance. We are confident that we are safe in asserting, though we have not the means of forming an exact calculation, that Pennsylvania, Maryland, and New England, notwithstanding their disadvantages of soil and climate, the circumstance of their being surrounded with formidable enemies, the comparative smallness of the population and capital of the mother country when they were settled, and the little progress which we had then made in the arts of material civilization, would show, positively, a larger and more rapid increase in wealth and population than the Australian dependencies during the first fifty years of their existence, were it not for the convict emigration with which we have supplied them, and the Government expenditure which that emigration has rendered necessary.

As to the moral and social comparison instituted by Lord Grey, we should hardly have imagined (did we not know his perfect ignorance of the subject) that he could have made it with a grave face. The early struggles of the North American colonists were directed, and their councils enlightened, by statesmen and legislators such as could not easily be matched—such men as Baltimore, and Penn, and John Smith, and Winthrop, and Sir Harry Vane. The fact that the Australian colonies have never, since their foundation seventy years ago, received or produced a man whose name is known on this side of the Equator, except to his mercantile correspondents, is not adduced by us as a symptom of decay in the intellectual vigour of our race; it arises simply from this—that in countries governed despotically by strangers, statesmen and legislators have nothing to do; and, therefore, they neither go nor grow there; and, though among the native Australian population there may be plenty of "village Hampdens" and "mute, inglorious Miltons," they will, so long as the system which Lord Grey delights to honour shall prevail, go down to their graves undeveloped and unknown, except perhaps as able editors of opposition newspapers, or as clever clerks in the Government offices. Lord Grey may make statements of the superiority of Australia in point of material prosperity, which will appear to the ignorant plausible enough; but we can hardly imagine his deceiving even himself by comparing the religious, moral, and intellectual standard, which unfortunately prevails in our modern colonies, with that of Baltimore, Pennsylvania, or New England.

THE PRESENT STATE OF YACHTING, A.D. 1848.

To the Editor of Bell's Life in London.

MR. EDITOR,—For the new hands who are joining our yacht clubs at home, as well as for some of our old friends at Sydney, Bombay, Bermuda, &c., I beg to send you the subjoined brief notes on the present state of yachting in Old England. I hope you will do me the favour to insert the letter; for I have epistolary proof that our friends, even at the Antipodes, search your columns anxiously to see how we are getting on in these matters with our 600 sail.

No. 1. First and foremost the Royal Cork Yacht Club, which originated prior to 1720 (more than a century since), is not progressing very favourably, owing in some measure to the disturbed state of Ireland. In 1828, the then Cork Water Club became the Cork Yacht Club; and in 1830, under the patronage of King William, the prefix of "Royal" was conceded to it, and in November, 1831, the club received their Admiralty warrant to wear the red ensign of H.M. Fleet, with a harp and crown in its union.

No. 2. The Royal Yacht Squadron (Cowes), which was first formed in June, 1815, flourishes as well as ever, and now contains nearly 100 sail, all over 30 tons, o.m. It received its title of "Royal" from King George IV., in September, 1820. The Admiralty warrant granting the white ensign of the navy to this club bears date, June, 1829, now nineteen years ago.

No. 3. The third yacht club that was formed in England is the Royal Thames, viz., in August, 1823; and in July, 1842, it received its Admiralty warrant granting the blue ensign with a crown in its fly. In 1836, it contained 68 yachts; in 1844, it numbered 89 sail; 123 sail in 1845. In 1846, it rose to 142 yachts; in 1847, it fell to 134 vessels, owing to the increase of yacht clubs on the coast, and now, in June, 1848, it contains sail. Surely so numerous a fleet should have a rear-commodore, that when sailing in three divisions, (as in the navy,) each division may be led by a flag officer.

No. 4. In 1826, the Royal Northern Yacht Club sprang up at Belfast and in the Clyde, all the vessels of which are over 10 tons, o.m., and in May, 1831, it received an Admiralty warrant granting the blue ensign of H.M. fleet. This club was first started at Belfast, in 1824, though generally hailing from 1826. One good feature in this flourishing club is, their having a club-yacht belonging to the club itself, and not to a single member, so that "yachtless" members can always ensure a day's cruise for a trifling "consideration." I don't know the exact annual expense of this club yacht.

No. 5. In 1827, Plymouth entered the field with her Royal Western Yacht Club, and in 1842 she changed her original ensign for the blue one of H.M. Fleet. This club ranks next to the Royal Squadron of Cowes.

No. 6. The Royal Eastern Yacht Club is the next in order of seniority (as to date of formation). Founded in 1836, it received permission to carry the blue ensign of H.M. Fleet in June 1836. Its head quarters are Leith and Edinburgh, but it has never made much way.

No. 7. In 1838 Southampton started its club, now the Royal Southern Yacht Club. Its colours are the blue ensign, bearing in a shield the Southampton Arms.

No. 8. A lull of four years now ensued, when the Royal Harwich Yacht Club sprung into existence in September, 1843, having the blue ensign with a lion rampant in the fly thereof. The Baltic and North Sea privileges of this club exceed that of any other in England.

No. 9. Liverpool now tried her hand at club making, and well succeeded. Founded in July 1844, she immediately received by Admiralty warrant the blue ensign of H. M. Fleet, bearing in its fly, as a device, a crown over the bird "Liver."

No. 10. The next association in seniority is the Royal Victoria of Ryde, whose vessels are all over 15 tons o.m. Founded in May, 1845, its red ensign is worn under a warrant dated June, 1845. This club is progressing most satisfactorily, and is in general estimation.

No. 11. Ireland now, in 1846, started another club, viz.—the Royal Kingstown Yacht Club (on the demise of the original Royal Irish Yacht Club). I believe that this club has recently changed its name into that of the Royal St. George's Yacht Club, vice Kingstown. Head quarters are in Dublin Bay.

No. 12. On Saturday, the 18th of April, 1846, the United Yacht Club was formed in London as a head-quarters or place of rendezvous for all royal Yacht Clubs, that members visiting the metropolis might meet under the same roof and foster a yachting esprit de corps, and no longer be dispersed at the other clubs, such as Arthur's, White's, the Parthenon, the Travellers', &c., &c. This club now meets daily throughout the year at the Thatched House Tavern, 86, St. James's-street, where it has a suite of rooms and every convenience of other metropolitan clubs. The annual subscription is two guineas, from May to May in each year.

No. 13. The thirteenth Yacht Club is the new Royal Irish Yacht Club, hailing from Dublin-Bay. A very distinguished club of the same name existed many years ago at Dublin, from which has sprung the Royal St. George's Yacht Club (late the Royal Kingstown). The colours of the R. I. Y. Club are the blue ensign, with a crown and harp in the fly. The club was founded July 21, i is now therefore but two years old, sesses a code which may probably b seded by Acker's. The Royal Iri Club was, I believe, originally called t nian Yacht Club.

No. 14. Early in 1847 the Roya
Yacht Club was founded at Carn
North Wales, and must eventually b first-rate association. I believe the R is indebted to the Marquis of Angle club-room, and that members of the Plymouth, and Ryde Squadrons are into the R.W.Y.C. without ballot.

No. 15. The last royal yacht c founded only in 1847, but it has g with giant strides. I allude to the Ro shire Yacht Club, under the commod
the Earl of Mulgrave, son of the M Normanby. Its head quarters are a and Hull; its flag the red ensign o jesty's fleet, and its burgee red, with crown over the heraldic white rose Up to July, 1848, no other royal y has been ushered into existence.

And moreover, Mr. Editor, there be an opinion gaining ground among y that no more yacht clubs are want another opinion is gaining ground th future no yacht club should put in any vessel under ten tons, o.m. Th to ten tons already exists in both club
Wight, in the clubs at Liverpool, Plymouth, and elsewhere, and bett agree to this rule. The craft under will then form "sailing," "rega

RARITY OF FEMALE PORTRAITS IN

mistress's window or whispered in her ear that she resembled "a red red rose," the lattice would have been indignantly shut, or the bard, perhaps, might have had his own ears boxed, for a blockhead and a dealer in truisms and prose. The very nymphs and goddesses that figured among the statues on the terrace of the royal palace of Madrid had their marble cheeks and bosoms smeared with carmine. This perversion of taste at the toilette not only destroyed the complexions of the court beauties, but what is much more distressing to lovers art—spoiled the female portraits of Velasquez and Carreno. The second King of Prussia used to amuse his leisure by taking likenesses of his grenadiers; and it is said that when he found his work too highly coloured, he would daub the patient's face with red paint, till it assumed the same fiery hue. The difficulty with the Spanish artists was, not to subdue their tints, but to bring them up to the crimson glow of their well-rouged sitters.—Sterling's Spanish Artists.

THE DOGS OF SIBERIA.—The draught-dogs, so faithful and useful to the northern Siberians, often receive but scurvy treatment at their master's hands. The Ostyaks, who are honesty personified, and who laugh at the common European precautions of locking up valuables and bolting doors, cannot endure the predatory propensities of their canine allies, and fly into a passion whenever an unlucky dog sneaks into their dwelling in search of warmth or food. The poor brute is immediately a mark for the blows and kicks of every body present, the storm of abuse being justified by the cunning and greediness of its object, who, if allowed to abide in the house, would soon reduce its inmates to short commons. There is some excuse for the dog's voracity, however; for according to Mr. Erman's account, they are considerably more than half-starved, and are rarely admitted to the fire to be fed, save when they are weary and distressed from a long journey. Severe as is the cold in those regions, protection from it is not essential to the existence, or even to the health of these hardy dogs. They sleep outside the houses in holes, which they thaw in the snow by their own warmth. At Obdorsk, where there are no pastures, and consequently no horses, four hundred dogs are kept by sixty inhabitants, and each of them is estimated to draw five poods (two hundred pounds) weight in the loaded sledge. About eight o'clock in the evening these four hundred brutes set up a hideous howling, by way of claiming their daily meal, consisting invariably of fish, which, for them, as well as for their owners' consumption, is first dried in the sun and then pounded, bones and all. Except this evening concert, a bark or a cry is rarely uttered by these dogs, unless at first starting when yoked to the sledge, or on coming across a reindeer team upon the road. Hydrophobia would be a terrible scourge in this dog district, but the disease is fortunately unknown there. Steller has stated the same thing of the dogs of Kamschatka, and Mr. Erman concludes that the malady is a result of the European system of living in towns. And as the Siberian dogs are so very moderately fed, he infers that excess, not want, generates the morbid habit. We are inclined to attribute more importance to the quality than to the quantity of the food. A fish diet may be more conducive to a wholesome state of the animal's blood than the masses of horse-flesh, paunch, and other rank and unclean offal commonly given to dogs in Europe, and especially in England, where the carnivorous addictions of the bipeds induce a belief in the propriety of unlimited flesh-feeding for quadrupeds.—Blackwood.

Mr. Poot, late head constable of Broadford, Tipperary, who was lately presented with a sword and an address by the magistrates on his promotion to the office of a sub-inspector, had written letters to Mr. Mahony, one of the lately arrested confederates; and these letters have been discovered. They were not at all treasonable; but one of them asked Mahony to get inserted in the Dublin papers a complaint of preference and partiality to the Roman Catholic constables. He has consequently been degraded from his sub-inspectorship.

A QUAKER EXPELLED FOR PAYING TITHES.—Mr. Jalico, a Quaker, having, as agent for a number of persons in Kilkenny and Tipperary, paid the tithe-rent charge to the various incumbents on the properties under his control, has been expelled by the Society. Mr. Jalico caused application to be made to the Court of Queen's Bench, last week, for a mandamus to compel the Society of Friends to restore him to their body. The Court held that it had no jurisdiction.

TO THE SUBSCRIBERS TO THE SYDNEY MORNING HERALD, RESIDING IN PARRAMATTA, WINDSOR, PENRITH, LIVERPOOL, AND CAMPBELLTOWN.

GENTLEMEN,—Many of you have complained to me of the late hour at which you receive your papers. The Herald is published every morning before six o'clock, and some of you do not receive it until past 10 night. This is of course highly prejudicial to the interests of such of you as are in business. Now, Gentlemen, this can be remedied; I will undertake on the 1st February to have your papers in Parramatta every morning by eight o'clock, and you can all have them before noon, if you can make some arrangement among yourselves to fetch them from this place. I will bring them half way, will you convey them the other half?

I shall be glad to receive any post-paid communications on this subject.

I remain, Gentlemen,
Your obedient servant,
HUGH TAYLOR,
Macquarie-street, Parramatta, Agent.

TO CAPTAINS, STOREKEEPERS,

HOTEL KEEPERS, AND THE PUBLIC IN GENERAL.

EX LOUISA.

SPLIT PEAS entirely superseded by the use of

ALEXANDER'S
PREPARED PEA FLOUR.

The many advantages derived from this Flour, in lieu of split peas, are sufficiently proved by the fact of its universal and increasing sale, not only in every part of the metropolis but also in every town throughout the kingdom. It is found much more economical, and spares much time and trouble, ten minutes being sufficient to make the soup. It requires no straining, as all impurities are removed by the process of preparing and dressing, thus rendering the Pea Flour entirely free from acid or flatulent properties. The flavour is acknowledged to be excellent, and the process secures its keeping for any length of time without the slightest injury.

Sold in packets—two-pence, three-pence, and six-pence each.

An experiment was made at the West London Union, in the presence of the Chairman of the Board of Guardians and others, on the 12th day of May last, to test the properties and economy of using Alexander's Prepared Pea Flour, for thickening soup, in preference to the split pea, and the result was as follows:—A large copper of soup was thickened to the substance required with Alexander's Pea Flour in FORTY MINUTES, at the cost of 7s. 8d., the flavour of which gave great satisfaction; the same quantity thickened to the substance with their split peas (contracted for) cost 9s. 3d., and required nearly five hours boiling, with a person employed during that time continually stirring to prevent burning.

N.B.—Pea Flour prepared expressly for making Pea-Pudding in ten minutes. Also, Green Pea Flour, for making and thickening soups.
